Foreword

Astrology has always sought to describe the subtle link between the heavens and human experience. Over the centuries, it has developed multiple symbolic languages to account for this correspondence: signs, planets, houses and aspects. Among these levels of observation, the degrees of the zodiac occupy a special place. They represent the finest scale of the zodiacal cycle, the ultimate precision through which the energy of a sign is nuanced and transformed.

Traditionally, the degrees have often been interpreted as symbolic images, omens or indications of destiny. This approach has given rise to numerous traditions, sometimes poetic, sometimes mysterious, seeking to capture a unique meaning in each degree. The best-known systems associate each degree with a symbolic image or scene intended to suggest a possible interpretation of the experience.

This book offers a different perspective.

In mindfulness astrology, the degrees are not regarded as symbols foretelling events, nor as keys to psychological interpretation. They are viewed as thresholds of attention, precise points in the zodiacal cycle where the experience can be recognised with greater subtlety.

Each degree corresponds to a moment in the maturation of a sign's energy. It does not predict what must happen, but what can be observed in experience as it manifests. It does not describe an outcome, but a moment in the living process.

This approach is part of a vision of astrology in which the birth chart is not understood as a system of influences, but as a symbolic mirror of the experience of consciousness. The planets represent psychic forces, the signs represent fields of energy, and the houses represent fields of experience. The degrees then specify the stage of maturation of the energy through which these forces manifest.

Thus, the zodiac appears as a living cycle, traversed by movements of emergence, stabilisation and fulfilment. Each sign unfolds over thirty degrees, each decan in nine stages, like so many subtle moments in which energy reveals itself, organises itself and then transforms.

The originality of this work lies in the simplicity of its intention. Each degree is formulated as an invitation to observation.

In this book, each of the 360 degrees of the zodiac is explored through the planets and angles of the chart — Sun, Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, Pluto, Ascendant and Midheaven — to show how each psychological function can actualise this particular moment in the energy cycle.

This book offers a subtle mapping of the zodiacal cycle, where each degree offers a nuance of attention, a point of presence, a moment of recognition.

Introduction

Astrology has often been approached as a language describing influences, trends or events. In the approach proposed here — that of mindfulness astrology — the birth chart is not regarded as a cause of human experiences. It is understood as a symbolic mirror of experience as it appears in consciousness.

From this perspective, the zodiac is not a mechanism that produces effects. Rather, it constitutes a map of attention, a set of symbolic markers enabling us to recognise the movements of experience at the very moment they arise.

This book proposes to explore the zodiac through one of its most subtle levels: the symbolic degrees.

Degrees as thresholds of attention

In mindfulness astrology, degrees are not interpreted as signs heralding events or destinies. They are viewed as thresholds of attention.

Each degree corresponds to a precise moment in the cycle of a sign, a particular instant in the unfolding of an energy. It does not describe what is bound to happen, but what can be recognised in the present experience.

Thus, each stage invites us to:

- observe an inner movement,
- discern a tension,
- recognise a process of maturation,
- or embrace a transition.

The degree asks us to correct or achieve nothing. It simply indicates where our attention might be directed.

Understood in this way, the zodiac becomes a support for presence. Each degree is an opportunity to recognise what is being experienced, here and now.

Degrees as the maturation of the sign's energy

Each sign of the zodiac represents a field of energy. This energy does not manifest uniformly: it evolves, transforms and gradually matures as it moves through the degrees.

The 30 degrees of a sign thus describe a process of energy maturation.

This process unfolds in three main phases corresponding to the three decans:

- 0° to 9°: emergence, birth of the energy, first movements, discovery.
- 10° to 19°: stabilisation, gradual organisation, clarification, integration.
- 20° to 29°: fulfilment – intensification, saturation, transformation or transcendence.

Each decan therefore has a fundamental dynamic.

But within this overall phase, each degree corresponds to a micro-moment in the process. The decan thus unfolds in nine successive stages, like an internal cycle of experience.

These stages represent nuances of focus, specific moments in the maturation of the sign's energy.

The degrees in the birth chart

In a chart, three elements structure the experience:

- the planet indicates a psychic force,
- the sign indicates the field of energy in which this force is expressed,
- the house indicates the field of experience in which it manifests.

The degree then specifies the exact moment of the energetic process in which this force is expressed.

Thus, a planet placed at a particular degree indicates the point of focus where the psychological function represented by the planet can be recognised.

Each planet actualises this degree according to its own function:

- the Sun actualises it as conscious realisation,
- the Moon as a mode of feeling and openness,
- Mercury as a mental process,
- Venus as a mode of relationship,
- Mars as a dynamic of action,
- Jupiter as a principle of integration and meaning,
- Saturn as structuring and maturation,
- Uranus as emancipation,
- Neptune as immersion and dissolution,
- Pluto as profound transformation.

The angles of the chart also play this role of actualisation:

- the Ascendant expresses the degree as a way of being, the manner of entering into experience,
- the Midheaven expresses it as a mode of contribution to the world.

The spirit of this book

The symbolic degrees presented in this book have been written in a very simple spirit: to indicate a direction of attention.

Each formulation is deliberately brief. It does not seek to interpret, explain or predict. It simply suggests a vantage point.

These phrases evoke a living movement of experience, which everyone can recognise within themselves.

Each degree thus acts as an invitation to presence.

An astrology of recognition

In the astrology of mindfulness, there is nothing to correct, nothing to improve, nothing to become.

The birth chart is the symbolic description of what is already manifesting in experience.

The symbolic degrees extend this vision. They allow us to refine our attention and recognise the precise nuance of the moment we are experiencing.

Astrology thus ceases to be a technique of interpretation and becomes an art of recognition.

Recognising what appears. Recognising the maturation of an energy. Recognising the transition from one state to another.

Each degree thus becomes a point of presence within the zodiacal cycle.

Structure of the book

This book presents:

- the 360 degrees of the zodiac, each formulated as a threshold of attention;
- the manifestation of these degrees through the planets and aspects of the chart.

Two appendices complete this work:

1. a reminder of the principles of mindfulness astrology,
2. a presentation of the transitions between the signs of the zodiac,

Ultimately, these degrees do not seek to explain life. They simply invite us to observe it with greater precision.

For when attention is fully present, experience no longer needs to be interpreted.

It is simply recognised.

The 30 degrees of the Sun in Aries

Sun 0 degrees Aries: Vital energy surges forth. Observe the birth of that which seeks to come into being.
Sun 1 degree Aries: Presence manifests fully. Remain attentive to what is beginning to unfold.
Sun 2 degrees Aries: The drive towards realisation takes shape. Observe the initiative without seeking to direct it.
Sun 3 degrees Aries: Fulfilment asserts itself. Recognise the spontaneity of what is coming into being.
Sun 4 degrees Aries: The vital dynamic takes hold. Remain present to what is unfolding before any intention arises.
Sun 5 degrees Aries: Vital force intensifies. Observe the energy invested in the realisation.
Sun 6 degrees Aries: The momentum of realisation is asserting itself. Remain present to what drives you forward.
Sun 7 degrees Aries: Realisation encounters resistance. Observe how to respond without rigidity.
Sun 8 degrees Aries: Strength comes up against its limits. Recognise the balance between will and reality.
Sun 9 degrees Aries: Realisation becomes more conscious. Remain attentive to what guides the drive without constraining it.
Sun 10 degrees Aries: Realisation seeks direction. Observe what gives meaning to the momentum.
Sun 11 degrees Aries: An intention for realisation takes shape. Remain present to what guides without controlling.
Sun 12 degrees Aries: Vital energy gains coherence. Recognise the harmony between spontaneity and clarity.

Sun 13 degrees Aries: Realisation is taking shape. Observe the balance between initiative and mastery.
Sun 14 degrees Aries: The drive towards realisation is stabilising. Remain attentive to what keeps vitality alive.
Sun 15 degrees Aries: Realisation reaches a point of balance. Observe the balance between self-assertion and presence.
Sun 16 degrees Aries: Awareness of what is being realised deepens. Remain present in the action without becoming rigid.
Sun 17 degrees Aries: Realisation seeks to recognise itself. Welcome it without identifying with success.
Sun 18 degrees Aries: The tension associated with the realisation intensifies. Observe the temptation to force the momentum.
Sun 19 degrees Aries: Vital energy requires adjustment. Remain attentive to the balance between power and listening.
Sun 20 degrees Aries: The energy invested in the achievement intensifies. Observe the fatigue arising from continuous effort.
Sun 21 degrees Aries: Acts of realisation are repeated. Remain attentive to what needs to be reoriented.
Sun 22 degrees Aries: Realisation is going round in circles. Recognise the call for a simpler form of expression.
Sun 23 degrees Aries: The drive to achieve is reaching saturation point. Observe what invites you to slow down without giving up.
Sun 24 degrees Aries: Self-assertion is fragmenting. Stay present with what can refocus internally.

Sun 25 degrees Aries: Realisation seeks a more stable form. Observe the drive towards a more lasting foundation.
Sun 26 degrees Aries: The markers of fulfilment waver. Stay attuned to what remains when the momentum subsides.
Sun 27 degrees Aries: Vital energy sheds excess. Recognise the opening towards a more settled realisation.
Sun 28 degrees Aries: The momentum of realisation slows naturally. Observe the transition from action to consolidation.
Sun 29 degrees Aries: The momentum of achievement is waning. Remain attentive to what now calls for stability.

The 30 degrees of the Sun in Taurus

Sun 0 degrees Taurus: Vital energy settles into sensation. Observe what seeks to take root for the long term.
Sun 1 degree Taurus: The need for stability emerges. Stay attuned to the drive to build over time.
Sun 2 degrees Taurus: Vitality anchors itself in the body. Observe what sustains action without agitation.
Sun 3 degrees Taurus: Continuity strengthens. Recognise the power of what develops slowly.
Sun 4 degrees Taurus: Experience takes root. Remain attentive to the inner security that underpins self-assertion.
Sun 5 degrees Taurus: Stability asserts itself. Observe the ability to hold a course without rigidity.
Sun 6 degrees Taurus: Vital force becomes more present. Remain attentive to what nourishes constancy.
Sun 7 degrees Taurus: The need to preserve emerges. Recognise the impulse to protect what has been built.

Sun 8 degrees Taurus: The concept of value becomes clearer. Observe what is worth investing in for the long term.
Sun 9 degrees Taurus: Attachment grows stronger. Remain mindful of the balance between perseverance and inertia.
Sun 10 degrees Taurus: Stability seeks structure. Observe how effort is organised over time.
Sun at 11 degrees Taurus: A solid framework is taking shape. Stay attuned to what supports fulfilment without restricting it.
Sun 12 degrees Taurus: Your relationship with the material world is becoming more refined. Recognise what truly nourishes your life force.
Sun 13 degrees Taurus: Consistency becomes more coherent. Observe the harmony between patience and clarity of intention.
Sun 14 degrees Taurus: Grounding stabilises. Remain attentive to what allows you to shine without becoming weighed down.
Sun 15 degrees Taurus: Stability reaches a point of balance. Observe the balance between steadfastness and openness.
Sun 16 degrees Taurus: Awareness of value deepens. Remain mindful of what sustainably supports action.
Sun 17 degrees Taurus: Attachment becomes visible. Embrace it without confusing being with possessing.
Sun 18 degrees Taurus: The need for security intensifies. Observe the temptation to hold on to what needs to evolve.
Sun 19 degrees Taurus: Constancy seeks to preserve itself. Remain attentive to the balance between loyalty and adaptability.

Sun 20 degrees Taurus: Stability intensifies. Observe the fatigue arising from prolonged effort without renewal.
Sun 21 degrees Taurus: Patterns repeat themselves. Remain mindful of what calls for an adjustment in pace.
Sun 22 degrees Taurus: Grounding turns to inertia. Recognise the call for a more flexible vitality.
Sun 23 degrees Taurus: Attachment becomes overwhelming. Observe what invites you to lighten your grip.
Sun 24 degrees Taurus: Security is becoming fragile. Stay present to what can restore inner balance.
Sun 25 degrees Taurus: Stability seeks a more vibrant outlet. Observe the momentum towards a more fluid realisation.
Sun 26 degrees Taurus: Your points of reference are wavering. Stay attuned to what remains when the effort eases.
Sun 27 degrees Taurus: Values are simplified. Recognise the essentials that still sustain the life force.
Sun 28 degrees Taurus: The anchor loosens. Observe the shift from possession to availability.
Sun 29 degrees Taurus: The need to hold on is waning. Remain attentive to what now calls for a new movement.

The 30 degrees of the Sun in Gemini

Sun 0 degrees Gemini: Vital force awakens in the movement of thought. Observe the surge of consciousness seeking to understand.
Sun 1 degree Gemini: Vitality captures multiple perceptions. Stay present with what catches your attention.

Sun 2 degrees Gemini: Ideas animate your radiance. Observe how thought nourishes your inner drive.
Sun 3 degrees Gemini: Curiosity stimulates self-assertion. Distinguish what truly illuminates your path.
Sun 4 degrees Gemini: Consciousness seeks to connect experiences. Recognise the link that gives meaning to your identity.
Sun 5 degrees Gemini: Personal expression comes alive through interaction. Stay mindful of what you convey.
Sun 6 degrees Gemini: Speech becomes a vehicle for vitality. Observe what it reveals about your being.
Sun 7 degrees Gemini: Perspectives intersect in your self-assertion. Keep your focus on what connects.
Sun 8 degrees Gemini: Consciousness compares and distinguishes. Recognise the tendency to separate what could be united.
Sun 9 degrees Gemini: Information nourishes vitality. Stay attuned to the thread that gives meaning to your journey.
Sun 10 degrees Gemini: Thought seeks to organise your expression. Observe the need for coherence in your actions.
Sun 11 degrees Gemini: The links between ideas take shape. Stay attuned to what clarifies your direction.
Sun 12 degrees Gemini: Consciousness prioritises experiences. Recognise what is essential to your radiance.
Sun 13 degrees Gemini: An inner logic is taking shape. Observe the harmony between understanding and self-assertion.
Sun 14 degrees Gemini: Clarity stabilises your radiance. Stay attentive to what maintains your lucidity.

Sun 15 degrees Gemini: Expression reaches a point of balance. Observe the balance between openness and consistency.
Sun 16 degrees Gemini: Your self-understanding becomes more refined. Stay mindful of what needs to be verified.
Sun 17 degrees Gemini: Thought ceases to be automatic. Recognise your responsibility for the meaning you give to your life.
Sun 18 degrees Gemini: The assertion of ideas intensifies. Observe your attachment to your convictions.
Sun 19 degrees Gemini: Meaning seeks to assert itself. Remain attentive to listening as much as to speaking.
Sun 20 degrees Gemini: Mental activity intensifies. Observe the fatigue arising from overthinking.
Sun 21 degrees Gemini: Ideas are repeating themselves. Stay mindful of the need to refresh your perspective.
Sun 22 degrees Gemini: Thoughts go round in circles. Recognise the call for a more vibrant simplicity.
Sun at 23 degrees Gemini: Your understanding is becoming overwhelmed. Observe what invites you to step back and be still.
Sun 24 degrees Gemini: Meaning fragments. Stay alert to what brings your energy together.
Sun 25 degrees Gemini: Consciousness seeks a way out. Observe the impulse towards a broader vision.
Sun 26 degrees Gemini: Mental reference points waver. Stay present with what remains stable within you.
Sun 27 degrees Gemini: Certainties are crumbling. Recognise the opening to a deeper understanding.
Sun 28 degrees Gemini: The mind lets go. Observe the transition towards a more sensitive attunement to life.

Sun 29 degrees Gemini: All explanation runs out. Remain attentive to the presence that radiates beyond words.

The 30 degrees of the Sun in Cancer

Sun 0 degrees Cancer: Vital energy awakens in your feelings. Observe the birth of a sensitive identity.
Sun 1 degree Cancer: A sensitivity illuminates your identity. Stay present with what touches your nature deeply.
Sun 2 degrees Cancer: Vital energy flows through emotion. Observe the need for security that guides your choices.
Sun 3 degrees Cancer: Your identity seeks an inner space. Recognise the importance of a place where you can centre yourself.
Sun 4 degrees Cancer: Your presence becomes intimate and protective. Stay attentive to what needs to be preserved.
Sun 5 degrees Cancer: Life force nourishes your inner world. Stay present with what seeks to be protected and nurtured.
Sun 6 degrees Cancer: An emotional bond supports your radiance. Observe what creates a sense of belonging.
Sun 7 degrees Cancer: Your sensitivity meets that of others. Keep your attention on the resonance between people.
Sun 8 degrees Cancer: Attachment illuminates your way of being. Recognise the need for security in your self-assertion.

Sun 9 degrees Cancer: Your feelings intensify and guide your direction. Remain attentive to what stabilises your presence.
Sun 10 degrees Cancer: Your life force seeks inner continuity. Observe what organises your emotional world.
Sun 11 degrees Cancer: Your emotional memory shapes your identity. Stay attuned to what repeats itself in your history.
Sun 12 degrees Cancer: Your inner experience is deeply ingrained. Recognise what needs to be welcomed with kindness.
Sun 13 degrees Cancer: Your identity is gaining emotional depth. Observe the need for inner stability.
Sun 14 degrees Cancer: A protective instinct asserts itself in your presence. Remain mindful of the balance between openness and protection.
Sun 15 degrees Cancer: Your presence reaches a delicate point of balance. Observe the balance between receptiveness and self-assertion.
Sun 16 degrees Cancer: Your sensitivity is becoming self-aware. Stay attuned to what it reveals about your identity.
Sun 17 degrees Cancer: Your inner world seeks recognition. Embrace it without shutting yourself away.
Sun 18 degrees Cancer: The need for security influences your self-assertion. Observe the temptation to withdraw.
Sun 19 degrees Cancer: Emotional bonds become central to your charisma. Remain mindful of the balance between attachment and presence.
Sun 20 degrees Cancer: Emotional intensity draws on your life force. Be mindful of the fatigue that arises from overstimulated sensitivity.

Sun 21 degrees Cancer: Feelings recur along your life path. Stay mindful of what needs to evolve.
Sun 22 degrees Cancer: Emotion is going round in circles. Recognise the call for a simpler form of calm.
Sun 23 degrees Cancer: Your sensitivity is reaching saturation point. Observe what invites inner rest.
Sun 24 degrees Cancer: The need for protection is fragmenting. Stay present with what unites your identity.
Sun 25 degrees Cancer: Your inner world seeks freer expression. Observe the impulse towards more open self-assertion.
Sun 26 degrees Cancer: Emotional anchors are wavering. Stay present with what remains stable at the core of your being.
Sun 27 degrees Cancer: Attachments are loosening. Recognise the opening up to a freer presence.
Sun 28 degrees Cancer: Sensitivity transforms into self-assertion. Observe the shift from protection to expression.
Sun 29 degrees Cancer: The need for security subsides. Remain attentive to what can now shine freely.

The 30 degrees of the Sun in Leo

Sun 0 degrees Leo: Vital energy seeks to manifest itself. Embrace the urge to live life to the full.
Sun 1 degree Leo: A need for expression is awakening within you. Remain attentive to what is asking to shine.
Sun 2 degrees Leo: Vital energy asserts itself spontaneously. Observe the simple joy of being at the heart of your presence.

Sun at 3 degrees Leo: Your vitality grows in intensity. Recognise the creative impulse that seeks to light your path.
Sun 4 degrees Leo: Assertiveness becomes more conscious. Stay attuned to the harmony between decision and inner truth.
Sun 5 degrees Leo: Vital energy expands. Remain attentive to what needs to be shared.
Sun 6 degrees Leo: Your radiance meets the gaze of others. Observe what comes to life through contact with the world.
Sun 7 degrees Leo: The need for recognition arises. Acknowledge it without becoming attached to it.
Sun 8 degrees Leo: Assertiveness grows in intensity. Stay present at the boundary between radiance and domination.
Sun 9 degrees Leo: Creativity is on full display. Observe what remains at the very heart of your expression.
Sun 10 degrees Leo: Expression seeks to organise itself. Observe what gives a stable form to your will.
Sun 11 degrees Leo: Your presence asserts itself consistently. Remain attentive to what sustains your radiance over time.
Sun 12 degrees Leo: Creativity takes shape. Recognise what allows your vitality to unfold freely.
Sun 13 degrees Leo: Assertiveness gains coherence. Observe the harmony between will and inner truth.
Sun 14 degrees Leo: Your radiance is stabilising. Stay attuned to what keeps your vitality alive.
Sun 15 degrees Leo: Presence reaches a point of balance. Observe the balance between radiance and centring.
Sun 16 degrees Leo: Assertion becomes self-aware. Remain present to what it reveals of your being.

Sun 17 degrees Leo: The impulse to exist seeks to recognise itself. Welcome the presence without identifying with it.
Sun 18 degrees Leo: The need to shine intensifies. Observe the temptation to confuse yourself with the image.
Sun 19 degrees Leo: Expression seeks to assert itself. Remain attentive to the balance between self-assertion and openness.
Sun 20 degrees Leo: Willpower intensifies. Observe the fatigue arising from the effort to maintain your radiance.
Sun 21 degrees Leo: Expression repeats itself. Remain mindful of what needs to be renewed.
Sun 22 degrees Leo: Presence revolves around itself. Recognise the call for a more authentic simplicity.
Sun 23 degrees Leo: The need to be seen becomes overwhelming. Observe what invites withdrawal and refocusing.
Sun 24 degrees Leo: Your charisma is fragmenting. Stay present with what unifies without forcing.
Sun 25 degrees Leo: Expression seeks a more fitting outlet. Observe the impulse towards a freer radiance.

Conclusion

At the end of this journey through the 360 degrees of the zodiac, one thing becomes clear: the zodiac is not merely a symbolic structure of the heavens; it is also a cycle of experience that can be recognised at every moment.

Each degree marks a precise moment in the maturation of a sign's energy. Some degrees evoke the emergence of a movement, others its stabilisation, and still others its fulfilment or transformation. Together, they form a continuous fabric in which energy unfolds, becomes nuanced, intensifies, and then transforms to make way for a new phase of the cycle.

From this perspective, the degrees are not indications of destiny. They do not describe what must happen or what one ought to become. They simply indicate a point of focus within the present experience.

When we observe the zodiac in this way, each degree becomes an invitation to recognise what is manifesting in our consciousness: an impulse, a tension, a clarification, a saturation, or a transition towards a new quality of experience.

Thus, astrology rediscovers a dimension that is often forgotten: that of the art of recognition.
The birth chart is no longer interpreted as a mechanism that explains existence. It appears, rather, as a symbolic map of experience, where the planets indicate psychic forces, the signs indicate fields of energy, and the houses indicate the domains of experience where these forces unfold. The degrees simply specify the moment in the energetic process through which this experience can be recognised.

In this approach, there is nothing to correct, nothing to improve, nothing to achieve. The energy of a degree is never an error or a flaw. It is simply the expression of a moment in the living cycle of experience.

When attention is focused on this moment with clarity, the energy can be recognised for what it is. And this recognition is often enough to reveal the rightness of the movement underway.

The zodiac then ceases to be a system of interpretation and becomes a means of presence.

Each degree reminds us that experience always unfolds in the present moment. The past is merely a memory, the future a projection; only the present moment allows us to recognise the true movement of energy.

From this perspective, traversing the degrees of the zodiac is akin to traversing the nuances of the movement of life itself.
Each degree is a threshold. Each threshold is an invitation to attention. And each moment of attention is an opportunity to recognise what is already there.

Thus, the 360 degrees of the zodiac can be seen as 360 points of presence, so many landmarks in the infinite cycle of experience.

For when attention is fully present, the zodiac no longer describes the world.

It simply becomes a reflection of the living movement of consciousness.

Appendix A: Guiding Principles and Concept of Mindful Astrology

There is a parallelism[1] (which Jung calls 'synchronicity')[2] between the structure of the sky at the moment of a person's birth and their psychological structure, including their energy fields. This parallelism demonstrates that the widespread belief that there is a cause-and-effect link between the stars and our destiny is unfounded and must be ruled out.

Consequently, there is no influence of the stars, no logic in planetary cycles, nor any preconceived plan in the heavens for the evolution of the psyche or a better future.

According to the philosopher Krishnamurti, we readily and willingly accept the idea that the psyche can evolve and flourish, to one day attain peace and happiness. But in reality, psychological evolution does not exist. The self will never become better. It tries, believing it can, but it

[1] There are other parallels with the structure of the psyche, such as palm lines, numerology, iridology, graphology, Chinese astrology, etc.

[2] Synchronicity is a concept in analytical psychology developed by the Swiss psychiatrist Carl Gustav Jung: the simultaneous occurrence of at least two events that have no causal link, but whose association takes on meaning for the person perceiving them. The event cannot be explained by causality.
In the context of astrology, the idea that the birth chart may be in synchronicity with a person's psyche evokes striking parallels with the quantum phenomenon of 'entanglement' (see on this subject the book The Birth Chart: Mirror of the Quantum Psyche by Jérôme Zenastral).

remains in subtle forms. It may vary from one moment to the next, but it always remains the self, that separating, self-centred activity, which hopes one day to become what it is not. We then see that the self is not in the process of becoming; there is only the end of suffering, and this end requires no time. It will not end tomorrow, but when we have perceived this movement.

If we speak so readily of evolution, it is also because this theory is taught to us from a young age and remains pervasive and omnipresent. The theory of evolution, based on Darwin's work, is presented as a proven scientific truth. It holds that all species have evolved towards something better, just like human beings. Today, it is the subject of various criticisms, and many scientists demonstrate its weaknesses and lack of foundation. For this theory to be verified, there would need to be a link between species. Yet palaeontologists observe the opposite and even demonstrate that humans are not the final link in a long chain, but merely one species among many inhabiting the earth. There are fossils, for example, that have remained unchanged for millions of years, or species that appear suddenly. According to some biologists, no positive mutation has ever been observed anywhere. All living things have always been complex since the beginning. Man does not descend from any previous species because his DNA is different from that of other species. He can therefore only have come from himself.
The events or difficulties we encounter are not predetermined to lead to a predestined future. To speak of a 'future', one would first have to prove that time exists. We all think we know what time is, but we cannot define it. According to Etienne Klein, time is a construct of the mind, an illusion designed to help us distinguish the present from our perception of the past. Whilst Newton asserted that time was universal, Einstein refuted this notion and linked space and time in his theory of relativity. There are as many times as there are different observers. Times become desynchronised when observers move relative to one another. According to physicists, time is always there, constantly renewing the present moment. The philosopher Rupert Spira says that memory seems to validate time and that if we examine this more closely, we see that in fact it validates timeless consciousness, which never changes. Memory creates the appearance of time, in which objects are regarded as existing independently of one another, and through which they seem to evolve. However, we have no experience of a past stretching indefinitely behind the present moment, nor do we have any experience of the present moment rolling ever onwards into the future. The idea that time is like a vessel containing all the events of the world is a temporal representation of consciousness in the mind.

Because man is conscious that he exists, he must be placed at the centre of consciousness, and not at the centre of the zodiac, as is commonly considered in contemporary astrological concepts.
Human beings are an integral part of a whole, including the Cosmos and the Earth.[3]

[3] Like quantum mechanics, developed at the beginning of the20thcentury, mindfulness astrology adheres to the questioning of the principle of separability. Unlike classical science, where the observer

Within the psyche, fields of energy or potential dynamic forces manifest themselves, making each person unique and endowing them, from birth, with a diverse creative potential. We are aware of the existence of our psyche. The psyche is therefore a manifestation of consciousness. It is composed of forces, tendencies and energy fields. Each energy field thus emerges from a totality to take form and shape a person's character[4] . Astrological signs not only symbolise the energy fields of the psyche, but are also associated with states of well-being. Indeed, each energy field is an opening onto consciousness and manifests its presence through a state of primordial well-being. From this state, in turn, a set of psychological characteristics emerges. These states of well-being are therefore not only the foundations of our psyche, but also the harbingers of our return to the benevolent presence.

When the psyche is no longer connected to the first principle of intelligence, it expresses itself by resonating with that intelligence, through what might be called a longing for the divine.

This longing is our quest for happiness, which we believe we can find outside ourselves, more specifically through is distinct from the observed, mindfulness astrology considers that man is within the Infinite, but also that the Infinite is within man.

our areas of interest. Occasionally, certain successes in these areas bring us temporary joy, but our thoughts once again seek confrontation with them. Despite success, comfort or security, most people are unhappy and do not find what they desire: their quest for happiness is not heading in the right direction. Happiness will cease to be a quest when we have realised our true nature, for it is the recognition of who we are that will put an end to ignorance. For it is ignorance that is the cause of all our problems[5] .

Survival issues have forced us so much to rationalise and find solutions that we have gradually become separated from our 'Self'. As Steve Taylor explains in his book The Fall, following climate changes, human beings have experienced an explosion of the ego which, for the past 6,000 years, has trapped them in a sort of collective psychosis.

We have mentally constructed value systems, a hierarchy of criteria, which are not always suited to who we truly are. This mental construct, this aggregate of thoughts and emotions, forms our ego. To the same extent, we have built socio-political systems based on rational considerations or on fear, but rarely on love and respect for everyone's freedom, resulting in psychological suffering. This suffering should be seen as a call to refocus on what is or [5] According to the philosopher Francis Lucille, ignorance is a false identity. We believe that the self is the personality. When there is ignorance, all the potentialities of the personality are misused and become slaves to the illusion of being a separate entity.

naturally emerges within oneself, such as trust, love, compassion, or fulfilment.

According to Western teachers of Advaita, the belief that one is a person, an entity or a separate consciousness is the cause of all suffering and ignorance. This belief is acquired from childhood, when we learn that consciousness resides in the body and the mind. According to the philosopher Francis Lucille, this belief in a separate self prevents us from discovering who we truly are. The discovery of who we truly are is a revelation; it reveals itself. There is nothing we need to do to bring about this revelation, but we can make it possible through self-inquiry.

In short, when ignorance ceases, the potential of the personality is realised. This requires us to direct our attention and our search inwards rather than outwards.

When we are fully open to the presence of the 'Self' (or consciousness), we experience the light side (its truth) of its manifestation. When energy is diverted and limited by the distorting prism of the ego or our mind, we experience the shadow side of that energy (its ignorance). This shadow side is laden with the side effects of ignorance (emotions, conflicts, etc.). But the good news is that when we are separated from the 'Self', it calls us back to its bosom and resonates within us through the longing we feel for it.

In astrology, the configuration of the heavens at the moment of birth is called a birth chart[6] . The planets of our solar system traverse the heavens along a single circular band known as the zodiac. It is composed of twelve 'signs' traversed by the planets of our solar system.

According to the guiding principles outlined in the first part, each sign symbolises a field of energy. It is associated with a state of well-being that echoes a set of psychological characteristics related to that state and generally referred to as 'meanings'[7] . For example, the state of well-being associated with the sign of Aries is wonder. The qualities of this sign, such as spontaneity, boldness, frankness and enthusiasm, resonate with its source: wonder.

[7] See the book The Twelve States of Bliss: Witnesses to Universal Consciousness by Jérôme Zenastral. This work explores the intimate link between mindfulness and the universal quest for happiness or well-being. Another aim of this essay is to help the reader understand how the concept of the Fall—as a loss of the original harmony or a separation from our true nature, present in many spiritual traditions—is linked to our ceaseless quest for happiness and fulfilment. This book also refers to the 12 signs of the zodiac, suggesting a connection between these astrological signs and the "12 felicities".

Each planet symbolises a dynamic force of the psyche. The force symbolised by a planet takes on a particular character depending on the sign it occupies. The energy field associated with that sign manifests itself through the psychological function (or force) represented by that planet. Thus, in a person's birth chart, when a planet transits a sign, that sign becomes significant[8] and reveals one of the forces of their character. The birth chart therefore reflects our personality in all its diversity:

- Aries, a fire sign, is associated with wonder, with its familiar driving forces such as spontaneity and enthusiasm…

- Taurus, an earth sign, symbolises sensual pleasure, with sensuality and enjoyment as its guiding themes…

- Gemini, an air sign, is like a playground where cheerfulness reigns, with its adaptive qualities such as flexibility and curiosity…

- Cancer, a water sign, is the crucible of our psyche where all gestation towards fulfilment takes place, with its receptors such as sensitivity and contentment…

[8] The twelve sectors of the zodiac were called "signs" by the earliest astrologers because, when a planet passed through a sector of the zodiac, they inferred a particular meaning from it.

- Leo, a fire sign, is our humanity in all its splendour, with its rays of sublimation such as magnanimity and generosity…

- Virgo, an earth sign, is associated with purity, with its corrective qualities such as impeccability and order…

- Libra, an air sign, symbolises harmony with its balancing factors such as objectivity and equanimity…

- Scorpio, a water sign, is the secret part of our psyche where an alchemy towards liberation takes place, with its guardians of the threshold such as letting go, self-inquiry…

- Sagittarius, a fire sign, is like an archer in a celestial cathedral, directing his arrow towards exultation or jubilation with its driving forces such as enthusiasm, fervour…

- Capricorn, an earth sign, is our inner temple with its pillars of wisdom and its factors of stability such as composure, maturity, reliability…

- Aquarius, an air sign, is our aspiration for liberty, equality and fraternity, with factors of emancipation and altruism such as autonomy, detachment, liberation, solidarity and friendship…

- Pisces, a water sign, is our longing for ecstasy, with its infinite openings to grace, such as meditation, compassion, contemplation…

When the energy symbolised by a sign is distorted, we experience the shadow side of that energy, laden with its side effects: emotions[9], fears, conflicts… Here are some common scenarios of such distortions:

- -In our frantic quest to discover everything (the sign of Aries), we can no longer channel our impulses and express our irritation through impulsiveness, impetuosity, animosity…

- -When we are driven by what we possess: pleasure, greed, attachment to an object or a person (the sign of Taurus), we lose our way in the maze of unfulfilled desires, dissatisfaction, greed, jealousy…

- -When we scatter our energies across multiple activities, and if nothing stable or profound takes root within us (the sign of Gemini), we become [9] Depending on our character, we are more or less predisposed to feel certain types of emotion. Any deviation in the psyche reverses itself and seeks an outlet through emotions that our mind considers negative.

fickle, we lose focus, and we are restless, impatient, and feverish…

- -If our childhood was troubled (the sign of Cancer), we desperately seek to fill a void and implicitly ask those around us to mother us. Overwhelmed by insatiability, unable to fully appreciate what we already possess, and embarked on a quest for the impossible, we express our dissatisfaction through irritability or pessimism and feel frustrated, sad, and discontented…
- -If we make ourselves the centre of the world, if we stamp our ego on everything (the sign of Leo), we become full of our own importance and turn to ostentation. This is the reign of excess. We identify with our profession or our title and we refuse, to a greater or lesser extent, to acknowledge the importance of our inner life. But beneath this mask, beneath this persona, our true nature refuses to be suppressed. This conflict generates side effects such as bad temper, fears or a sense of superiority such as disdain, vanity, pride…

- -Due to a lack of self-confidence, a fear of being criticised, or a fear of having our inner organisation disrupted (the sign of Virgo), we are tempted to isolate ourselves so as not to lose our way, to protect ourselves by adopting a distinctly introverted attitude (reserve, sobriety, caution). But the threat of life's irrationality is there, ever-present. Hence our anxiety and our persistent sense of insecurity. We are tempted to seek shelter by strengthening our defences: by being concerned with respectability, a sense of duty, scrupulous honesty and the perfect civility. The result is a feeling of inferiority that turns us into a modest, shy person who errs on the side of modesty.

- -In our desire to please everyone, we compromise ourselves (the sign of Libra). Off-centre, we weigh up the pros and cons of everything; we take one step forward and another back, or we commit to one thing and then to its opposite. Deeply troubled when faced with a choice, we waver between two temptations without being able to make up our minds, and we end up feeling flustered, discouraged or disappointed. This problem of indecision or procrastination more or less condemns us to inaction or lukewarmness in our behaviour. Every choice has its pros and cons. Hesitation sets in when these choices seem equivalent. It becomes a problem when we do not make the effort to explore the various possibilities and to take responsibility for our decisions.

- Resisting any transformation blocks our intense energy (the sign of Scorpio). This repressed energy finds an outlet through the exercise of power, manipulation, destruction or negativity. When we become negative, we quickly become tormented. Anxiety, guilt or unhappiness are familiar states when we repress our aggressive and erotic instincts. We feel condemned and guided by a guilty . We also sometimes externalise our destructive aggression by directing it against an environment we perceive as hostile. We revolt against the slightest pressure, we rebel against all discipline and constraint, and we cannot tolerate any authority. We must recognise the absurdity of trying to control what we cannot change or influence, and realise the loss of energy and well-being that perfectionism and relentless striving entail. Letting go involves changing oneself or accepting oneself with one's limitations and values, which makes it easier to accept others. Letting go is essential for well-being, without, however, giving away the positive secrets that protect us, stabilise us and make us stronger.

- Our overly high standards (the sign of Sagittarius) drive us towards intolerance and insensitivity towards others. If our need to feel in perfect harmony is denied, our ego then becomes the seat of a process of expansion, of inflation. Consequently, we are swept away by a self-centred exaltation where everything leads to a sense of intoxication and grandeur for ourselves, or by a rebellion, which grants us the excess that is essential to us. In the latter case, we rebel against the truth of our environment and openly fight against prejudices and preconceived notions.

- We sometimes confuse self-control with repression (the sign of Capricorn). It is no longer wisdom but rigidity. Our creativity is inhibited by pessimism or by an excessive concern for respectability. We overcompensate for our desire for power or our thirst for elevation with an attitude of excessive humility and selflessness. We also sometimes assert our ego harshly, which leads us to experience a will to power in a genuine thirst for domination. Asceticism allows us to fulfil ourselves in complete serenity.

- It is believed that to regain Freedom, we must take the path of individualism, that process of emancipation which allows each person a certain independence from social rules (the sign of Aquarius). Our thoughts believe themselves to be dependent on systems and fixate on an ideal of freedom where we accept no constraints, nothing that might bind us to an idea, a family, a place, or a country. An ideal where we are free in our movements and our initiatives.

Our hypersensitivity makes us emotional, easily influenced, vulnerable (the sign of Pisces). It is therefore natural to hesitate, to feel our way, to question ourselves. We try one direction then another, riding a wave that is always slipping away. We give the impression of revelling in the undefined and the undecided, tormented by the impossibility of finding our true path. -confusion tells us to move forward in this mist. It echoes a consciousness vaster than our individual consciousness. It is an indescribable opportunity for us to realign ourselves with consciousness. This involves introspection, an exploration of our innermost being. In this state of meditation, we discover, in the background of our individual consciousness, a space of freedom and infinite love.

Appendix B: The transitions of energy from one sign to another

Aries-Taurus transition

The momentum, having sprung forth in the sign of Aries and pushed forward, now seeks to settle. What has been initiated needs to be inhabited, felt and stabilised. Movement ceases to be an impulse and becomes a presence.

Taurus-Gemini Transition

What has been embodied no longer needs to be sustained by fixation. A new lightness emerges, like a call to movement after stillness. In this transition, attention leaves the density of sensation to open up to the movement of thought and exchange.

Gemini-Cancer Transition

What was observed by the mind begins to be felt from within. In this transition, attention gradually shifts away from the surface of exchanges to draw closer to the lived experience. The need to name gives way to the need to contain. It is no longer the coherence of thoughts that matters, but the ability to remain present to what is being experienced, without intellectual mediation.

Cancer-Leo Transition

What was contained within now seeks to manifest itself on the outside. In this transition, attention leaves the inner sanctuary to turn towards living affirmation. The need to preserve gives way to the desire to show oneself as one is.

Leo-Virgo Transition

What has been fully expressed no longer needs to be put forward. In this transition, self-assertion gives way to listening to how things work. It is no longer the power of one's charisma that matters, but the quality of one's presence in action.

Virgo-Libra Transition

What has been meticulously observed and refined no longer needs to be constantly adjusted. Manifestation now calls for a different mode of presence, less focused on individual adjustment and more open to relationship. Attention is no longer focused on what needs to be improved, but on what needs to be connected.

Libra-Scorpio Transition

Even when harmonious, agreements are no longer enough to contain what seeks to be experienced in depth. What has been brought into connection now calls to be felt directly, beyond the polite forms of connection. In this transition, attention shifts away from the search for agreement and turns towards the truth of feeling.

Scorpio-Sagittarius Transition

What needed to be acknowledged has been. What needed to be transformed has been undone. The experience, freed from its burden, no longer needs to focus on the shadow or the depths. A new energy becomes available. In this transition, attention moves away from the density of inner experience to rediscover space, perspective and confidence.

Sagittarius-Capricorn Transition

What has been understood and sensed seeks to move beyond the realm of intention and into that of lived reality. Openness is no longer enough; it calls for concrete form. The passage into Capricorn does not mark a closing of the horizon, but a shift in our relationship to time and commitment. Where Sagittarius invited us to explore and believe, Capricorn invites us to build and take responsibility.

Capricorn-Aquarius Transition

What has been built now stands firm without needing constant maintenance. Experience no longer needs to be carried at arm's length. A new openness emerges, freed from the weight of obligation and the pressure to produce results. In this transition, attention shifts away from the verticality of effort to open up to space. Experience ceases to be driven by constraint and becomes open to a freer, more collective intelligence, less centred on control.

Aquarius-Pisces Transition

What has been understood, differentiated and clarified can now be released. In this transition, attention shifts away from separative lucidity and enters into resonance. It is no longer the clarity of vision that matters, but the capacity to embrace experience without internal boundaries. Thought gradually falls silent to make way for holistic sensitivity, empathy and silent communion.

Pisces-Aries Transition

There is nothing left to let go of, nothing to embrace, nothing to understand. From the undifferentiated, momentum arises. In this transition, attention shifts from the indistinct infinite to the precise moment. It is no longer acceptance that takes precedence, but birth. A movement emerges without reason, without plan, without past.

The 360 Degrees of the Zodiac

The Symbolic Degrees

in mindfulness astrology

This book offers a comprehensive exploration of the 360 degrees of the zodiac, presented as invitations to self-reflection. For each degree, the meaning is explored in relation to the planets and angles of the birth chart.

Each degree corresponds to a micro-moment in the zodiac's energy cycle: emergence, stabilisation or fulfilment. It simply suggests where to focus one's attention in order to recognise what is being experienced.

In the birth chart, the planets represent psychic forces, the signs represent fields of energy, and the houses represent fields of experience. The degree then specifies the stage of maturation of the energy through which these forces manifest.

This book offers an original approach to astrology: an astrology based on presence, observation and the recognition of experience as it appears.

As the pages unfold, the 360 degrees thus become 360 opportunities for presence, so many points of focus for recognising the living movement of existence.
